vision for tomorrow...

Vision, inspired dreams, work, and freedom of individual initiative have taken many an American boy and girl out of the world of play into the world of accomplishment.

In this land there is room to climb to the very top... for to eager young Americans the door is wide open to opportunity, to advantages beyond measure.

Parents and teachers must join forces to see that our boys and girls go places under their own power... and keep on doing it. With their help, young America will meet the future with chin up—confident and ready.

Yes, confident and ready. For today

American boys and girls have at their disposal the finest educational facilities in the world. Among them is Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.

Teachers and parents alike praise Compton's for carrying forward the highest educational ideas, and particularly for its contribution toward balanced thinking.

To prepare youth for the years that lie ahead is Compton's specific purpose. It provides today the materials out of which young people will shape the accomplishments of tomorrow.

Write for the interesting free booklet, "Learning To Use Your Encyclopedia."

STATE-WIDE RETIREMENT

The proposed state-wide retirement bill, covering all school districts not otherwise provided for by law, has been put in final form by the Legislative Committee and copies of it will be available for distribution at an early date.

Individuals continue to make inquiry as to how they may assist in its passage. The answer—make sure that your state senator and your state representative will support it.

100% HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICTS

A large majority of the high school districts have already forwarded dues for all teachers. Space does not permit their listing but it does make possible an expression of gratitude for their helpfulness in this respect.

ANNUAL CONVENTION

Wartime conditions make it difficult to plan and conduct a state meeting just as it is difficult to administer an educational program in any school at the desired level of efficiency.

The officers of the Association take this opportunity to thank you for the part you have played, by your presence or otherwise, in making the Convention a success.

100% COUNTIES FOR 1944-45

Holt—G. Frank Smith, County Superintendent of Schools

Howard—Omer Foley, County Superintendent of Schools

Perry—Mrs. Ora Nelson Guth, County Superintendent of Schools

Scotland—Mrs. Ernest E. Leeper, Acting County Superintendent of Schools

Shelby—Frederick Dodge, County Superintendent of Schools

Ripley—Mrs. Dacy E. Hawthorne, County Superintendent of Schools

Clark—Mrs. Richard Mileham, Acting County Superintendent of Schools

Worth—Mr. R. S. Fadeley, County Superintendent of Schools

Schuyler—Mrs. Inez Scotten, County Superintendent of Schools

Many more counties have all the rural teachers enrolled and many lack only a few of being 100%. Twelve hundred more enrollments have been received than had been received at this time a year ago. It merely means that dues are being paid more promptly.

FEBRUARY 27—DATE TO REMEMBER

The proposed new Constitution will be submitted as a whole to the voters of Missouri for ratification at a special election on Tuesday, February 27, 1945.

As far as the educational provisions are concerned it should be said that they follow most closely the recommendations made by the Committee on Constitutional Revision and approved by the Assembly of Delegates.

SIGNIFICANT UNDERTAKING

The Missouri Council for the Social Studies believes that a study of the proposed new Constitution would be a live and vital project for social studies classes.

Acting on this belief the group is now actively engaged in the preparation of necessary materials, including a teacher's outline and two units of work—one on the junior high school level and one on the senior high school level.

It is hoped that these and other materials will be available in November.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

Recognizing the tremendous influence the Pupils Reading Circle has exerted in the building of good elementary libraries, it has been frequently suggested that a similar plan more limited in scope be initiated for the development of high school libraries.

Any suggestions you may have in this area would be helpful.

A LIFT TO THE TAXPAYERS, TOO

IN THIS WAR the railroads have done twice as big a transportation job as in the first World War.

But they are doing another job which may not be so well known, as is shown by these contrasting facts:

In the last war, the operation of the railroads took money out of the United States Treasury.

In this one, the railroads are putting money into the Treasury.

In the last war, when the Government took over the railroads, even though freight rates and passenger fares were raised, Congress had to appropriate more than $1,600,000,000 to meet deficits.

In this war, the railroads have been managed by their owners. A far bigger and better transportation job has been done. And, since Pearl Harbor, the railroads have turned into the United States Treasury the tremendous sum of $3,250,000,000 in taxes—and today are paying federal taxes at the rate of nearly $4,250,000 every 24 hours.

And, on top of all this, the railroads in the same months since Pearl Harbor have paid for the support of state, county and city governments another $750,000,000 and are today paying state and local taxes at the rate of $800,000 per day.

That's five million dollars a day paid in taxes—ten times as much as the owners receive in dividends.

Where Will the War Leave Us?

The author of this article, a teacher of aeromechanics, is on leave of absence from the St. Louis public schools. —Editor.

TO THOSE OF US who have been assigned at times to training programs of the various branches of the armed forces, a picture of postwar education reveals itself probably differing but little in details as we individually attempt to appraise the dark future. The problem of teaching twelve million men to become professional soldiers, sailors and marines in this war has been a most gigantic task.

The present war differs from all wars in the past due to the specialized branches in each department of activity. This probably can best be exemplified by citing the aviation branches of the Army and Navy. Here officers and men are taught not only how, when or where, but also, the do. Meteorologists are trained thoroughly in a few months as men never have been in the past. Pilots and ground crews have to know the detailed theory of internal combustion engines, propellers, radio, nautical or celestial navigation, electricity, etc., as well as to practically use this theory. One could write a most interesting thesis running into volumes on this subject alone.

But what about the postwar period? Frankly, I wish I knew just what problems in education will confront us. We do not know when and at what stage of scientific wizardry the war will cease. This is most important and will definitely determine peace time industrial activity. *

We do not know the postwar economic status. This situation will be the all important factor in our civil, national and international adjustment. What degree of inflation will confront us? How about little business—of big business? These questions I leave to others to debate—as one man's opinion is as good as the next.

However, in the discussion of postwar education, one thought seems to be prevalent wherever one goes, namely that the readjustment will require much more vocational facilities and training than academic.

Everyone agrees that where a young person's educational career has been interrupted by military requirements, few will return to renew their schooling. Remember that a majority of the young men of twenty in the services will age terrifically during the sojourn in the military forces. Examples are manifold and common.

Most of these people who return will want to enter the business and industrial world. The nation's school systems should take cognizance of this fact and start preparing now for the huge demands upon them when the time arrives. Night schools especially will be taxed. The vocational guidance and adjustment programs will be swamped. "What shall I do and how can I use my military training in the every day peace time life of our nation now that the war is over?" Trained, practical vocational guidance personnel using plain, ordinary horse sense will work over time. This thought is uppermost in the minds of educators in Florida to the State of Oregon, California to Maine.

America's future will depend greatly upon how this nation meets the educational demand after this war is over. Educators, the nation over will have the golden opportunity to sell education as it never has been sold to the public before. Let us prove that an effective, efficient good citizen should attend school from his kindergarten days on through to the grave. The armed forces have given millions a taste of what learning will do in self preservation and existence—let us continue and not let our fighting men and women down when they return.

"Mother! I can't find my sweater."

"Well, wear one of Jean's, then."

"Mother! I can't find my hat."

"Well, take one of Joan's, then."

That's how it goes when you have twins in the family.

In industry, this idea is called "interchangeability of parts." And it's been a General Motors keynote since the earliest days.

A great contribution to this very idea was made by Cadillac in 1906 when they decided to try for the Dewar Trophy, a prize for the greatest mechanical advance made by any motor car manufacturer. They shipped three cars to London.

These three cars were then taken apart and the parts put in one big pile. Then American mechanics assembled three complete cars from these mixed parts, ran them, and won the trophy.

General Motors men realized that this principle of making parts exactly alike so they could be used interchangeably must be applied in manufacturing better things for more people. Using this principle, motor cars by the millions were mass produced. And when war came, these General Motors men had the know-how to make war machines by the same methods in vast numbers and in record time.

Today, under the destruction of war, interchangeability of parts is a lifesaver. Machines of war can be repaired from each other's parts or spare parts. This plane, for instance, will be ready to fly again in a few days.

And think of the fronts where ground crews must work frantically to make repairs under fire. Precious minutes are saved for our side because every part fits with jewel-like precision.

American industry is full of just such remarkable achievements as this. And that's because, in our country, men have been rewarded for doing things in new and better ways.

This is the idea responsible for much of the good, full life of prewar days. It has certainly been of great aid to the war effort. And it will just as surely produce more and better things for more people in the years to come.

CENTER SCHOOL, A SMALL one-room rural school, in a rather secluded area, was an excellent example of what this quotation means.

The school yard was well kept—had a few shrubs and flowers thus giving it a more homelike appearance. The buildings were well painted. The playground equipment consisted of swings, teeter-totters, volley ball and net and a baseball and bat.

The schoolroom was decorated attractively with the proper shade of buff colored paint. The tan window shades were always adjusted properly. Window curtains were plain and simple and were kept pushed back close to the window frame in order to let in more light.

Three good pictures were hanging by parallel cords on the schoolroom walls.

The large bulletin board was covered with last minute news-articles brought in by the children, a creative poem by a fourth grader, colored paper backs from new books and samples of children's handwriting. A smaller bulletin board held pictures which the sixth grade children had collected while studying the unit on Egypt.

The floor was clean. The teacher's and pupils' desks were in order.

The library was catalogued and all the books placed in their proper places. The encyclopaedias were placed on a low shelf where every child could use them. The reading table was centered by an attractive bouquet of yellow flowers. Three or four attractive books were on the table. The clever book ends were two rocks which were cleaned and shellaced.

The teacher, a most important factor, was attractively dressed, neat, clean, fingernails clean and hair well-groomed. At a glance, we were aware of an individual who was pleasing, understanding and kind, but one who was master of the situation.

Near the front of the room was a chart labelled "Committees." A child explained it as follows:—The committees were appointed by the children and each committee served one week. (1) the Reading Table committee kept the table in order, changed the books and was responsible for something new and different, such as a new bouquet, shell, rock-vase, piece of pottery, etc., (2) Host or hostess received visitors and seated them, (3) Library committee kept the library in order and helped check out books, (4) Room committee assisted with heat and ventilation regulation, (5) Hand-washing committee cared for the hand-washing drill before lunch, (6) Blackboard committee cleaned boards and erasers.

A set of hand-made charts in the supply cabinet proved to be standards set up by the children and teacher. The first chart was entitled "Standards for Oral Reading" and contained statements similar to this: (1) We must read clearly, (2) We must hold our book properly, (3) We must stand or sit properly while reading, etc. Other charts were labelled: (1) Standards for Silent Reading, (2) Standards for Oral English, (3) Standards for Written Composition, (4) Standards for a Good Letter.

A child explained that these standards were reviewed and placed where all children could see when they were needed.

Before the recreation or recess period, the chairman of the game committee explained what game would be played and all plans were made while the group was together. Needless to say that the teacher was in the game too.

The noon hour was well planned and cared for. Just after dismissal, each child washed his hands, the water was poured by a monitor, the liquid soap was also poured by another child. Paper towels were used for drying. Each child took his place at his own desk and waited until everybody was seated.

Grace was sung and the lunch was begun. Twenty minutes were spent for the lunch period, during which time many opportunities arose for the teaching of health and good manners.

TAUGHT IN THE GRADE IN WHICH THEY USE THEM

The Teacher and the Postwar World

THE POSTWAR WORLD is just around the corner. Already industry is moving toward changes called for by peace. The schools face a job of reconversion which is just as fundamental and significant. Decisions of great moment must be made, new educational programs instituted.

In preparation for war, school shops have trained nine million workers in specific skills needed in manufacturing armament. In preparation for peace, many of these workers must be retrained in skills needed for civilian services and the production of civilian goods.

After the war a million boys and girls will return to school from jobs in office and factory where high wartime wages have permitted a way of life for which many students will find daily study an unsatisfactory substitute. Helping these young people regain satisfactions in a type of accomplishment that has no immediate monetary recompense, comparable to the joys they have experienced from a full pocketbook, will be no easy task.

An indeterminate number of veterans who take advantage of the educational provisions of the "G. I. Bill of Rights" will resume educational careers interrupted at the high school level. These young men will have had sobering experiences of conflict and maturing experiences of responsibility making it difficult for them to think geometry and history in the same terms as the fourteen-to sixteen-year-olds whose lives have been only indirectly touched by war. Courses and methods must be revamped to their needs. The extent of such adjustments is indicated in the plans some cities are making for veterans' high schools devoted exclusively to the needs of the returning service man.

The postwar school has an important assignment in reconversion of personnel. Qualifications for teachers have been lowered in hundreds of communities. There are more than 50,000 teachers to whom emergency substandard certificates have been issued to prevent the closing of school doors against a million children. These people are performing a substantial wartime service. Some of them are retired teachers who have reentered the ranks at considerable sacrifice. The maintenance of a high standard of education, however, demands that qualifications for teachers be the highest possible. The raising of qualifications and the selection and preparation of the most capable youth for teaching is a primary step for the postwar educational world.

The war has submitted American education to unusual appraisals. The millions of youth quickly trained in the highly technical tasks of modern warfare, and now so effectively employing that training on battle fronts around the world are testimony to the high quality of their schooling. The million men in the draft who did not have the minimum educational requirements set by authorities of the armed forces at the beginning of the war for any kind of service under arms, indicate the extent to which American educational opportunity is still unrealized.

Last July, the Director of the Selective Service System testified before a U. S. Senate Committee that 2,426,500 men had been rejected for physical defects. A very large percentage of these defects could have been prevented or corrected by a sound program of health education available to every American school child. The postwar school will be far short of what the American people have a right to expect if it does not include the means of educating all American youth, and a program of health education which will be the basis of physical well-being for every citizen.

These are only a few of the problems faced by those who plan the postwar schools. The part education is to have in the establishment and maintenance of the peace, whether the program of education shall include a term of required military training, whether the public schools are to expand the period of schooling from twelve to fourteen years, what program of adult education is to be offered, are among other decisions which must be made—and soon. In these decisions, the profession must take the part of leadership.

That's why frosty bottles of "Coke" belong in your home refrigerator. At the words Have a "Coke", refreshment joins the party to make it gayer, brighter. The good old American custom of the pause that refreshes is spreading in many lands around the globe,—has become a happy symbol of our friendly, refreshing home-ways.

Whatever program of education is to be offered at public expense, it is increasingly clear that the federal government must bear a share of the cost. It is inconceivable that the federal government should go through the experience of calling upon every youth, everywhere, to perform the extreme duty of citizenship without recognizing some responsibility for participating in the expense of preparing good citizens.

Federal aid to education will come. It will come in answer to demands that cannot be ignored—demands for increased services of education, some of which we have mentioned above. It will come whether teachers work for it or not. The only question is whether these improvements shall be imposed from above in a program of education controlled by the federal government, or be directly under the guidance and management of local and state authorities.

The profession is faced today with responsibilities for leadership such as it has never been faced before. These responsibilities must be met almost immediately. It is a matter of the greatest urgency that teachers support actively and upon every occasion the Congressional legislation which would help the local communities finance the educational changes that are inevitable, and leave the control of the schools in local hands.

Teachers may aid the passage of this legislation by insisting as individuals that their Congressmen support it. They may write, and ask others to write to their U. S. Senators and Representatives asking for passage of S. 637 and H. R. 2849, bills which are now before the Senate and House respectively. They may study these bills and bring them and their implications forcefully to the attention of citizens of their communities. However, the only chance of success for these measures, as well as for the achievement of other advances in education stimulated by the experience of this war is through one hundred per cent united action.

There are a million teachers in the United States. Working together they may accomplish as much in the next decade of transition as has been accomplished for education in the last half century. The National Education Association has paved the way for this cooperation in its five-year program of unification, expansion and development. Upon the achievement of such a program depends in large measure the position of the teacher as a leader and the place of his profession in American society.

The five-year program consists essentially of three goals: (1) To secure a systematic increase in membership in the National Education Association to include at least 90% of American teachers; (2) to give greater strength to the programs of state and local associations, (3) to provide machinery for instant and effective cooperation of local, state and national associations in advancing the educational program, meeting the changing needs of students, and improving the welfare of teachers.

Every teacher should know the proposals for new and better services in American education, and find the way in which he can contribute to their realization. Professional literature will keep him informed. Association with his fellows in programs of action will give vitality to his own contribution. The American Nation has mobilized successfully for war. It can and should be mobilized as effectively for peace. Teachers will be an important unit in the forces of reconstruction.

EDUCATION IS LIVING

In summary, the factors which make this little school a place where "Education Is Living" are: (1) An alert, wide-awake teacher, clean, neat and understanding, (2) A clean tidy room at all times, (3) Children committees; thus a sharing of responsibilities, the developing of a feeling in each child that he is necessary to the school's welfare, (4) An ample amount of equipment which is used.

Shaping up NOW

for the time when "Highways are Happy Ways" again!

Tomorrow's "dream bus" is much more than a dream. It is shaping up today, in full scale models that will soon be translated into gleaming fluted metal, curved plastic glass, new type chairs built for long-trip relaxation—many comfort features we can't even talk about now.

Super-coaches like this are coming, sure as Victory—and Greyhound will make all possible speed in their construction, to replace buses over-worked by the pressure of wartime travel . . . and to give eleven million returning men and women of the armed forces a more delightful way to see and enjoy "This Amazing America" they fought for.

HEARINGS ON FM BANDS

To assure education "a home of its own on the air," educators, led by U. S. Commissioner of Education Studebaker, have drawn up a bill of requirements which were presented at the Federal Communications Commission hearings on September 28.

The hearings were ordered by Chairman Fly of FCC to review the present allocation of bands of frequency in the radio spectrum.

Education's interest was centered on frequency modulation (FM) bands. Mr. Studebaker asked that a total of 15 channels be allotted for education in order to meet the growing interest in this form of educational

A helpful discovery for you straight from our fighters

Teaching, like a combat job, is a long steady uphill pull. And this demands pretty smooth-going nerves. ... Of course, the degree of strain and intensity is different. But if chewing Gum has been discovered by our boys to help relieve nervous tension, being looked upon as an on-duty necessity, you might care to see if it might not ease down some of that nervous tension for you when you go home from school ... particularly if you have papers to mark, reading or studying to do.

Teaching is also war work

We don't claim that chewing Gum will prove useful and helpful to you, too. But we do say that here's a handy, little first hand discovery straight from the front that you might find worth your trying some day. Some day when wholesome, refreshing, popular Doublemint is again available here.

Just now, our entire limited output of Doublemint (a real-mint, best quality Gum) is serving our overseas men, helping them fight battle nerves and nerve wear-and-tear. ... But some day soon, we hope, Doublemint will be once more in your home store and at your service.

HENRIETTA SCHOOL REDECORATED; NEW TEACHERS HIRED

The Henrietta school building has been redecorated under the supervision of the superintendent, G. E. Temple. Two new members have been added to the faculty: Mr. Allen Richardson, former superintendent of the Rayville school, who teaches the 7th and 8th grades; and Mrs. Wm. L. McKnight, who teaches commerce, home economics, and girls' physical education in the high school. Teachers who were retained in their former positions include Miss Mildred Rolls, Miss Lillian Watkins, Mrs. Cleola Meyer, Mr. F. L. Stillions, and Mr. G. E. Temple.

The food preparation class consisting of 15 members has canned over 100 quarts of fruits and vegetables including green beans, carrots, corn, peaches, tomato juice, salad-pack and hot-pack tomatoes. These foods will be used in laboratory work and in serving special meals which the department has contracted to serve.

The general business class decorated and arranged two grocery displays in the windows of local merchants as a project. In one window ration-free merchandise was featured, and in the other Loose-Wiles products were featured with related foods.

CONFERENCES ON THE TEACHING OF LATIN AMERICAN LANGUAGES

As far as possible, the conferences are scheduled in connection with meetings of state or regional education associations or of organizations of teachers of Spanish and Portuguese.

One of the conferences will be held on November 2, in Kansas City during the annual meeting of the Missouri State Teachers Association. The Missouri Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish is in charge of the conference program.

Stephen L. Pitcher of the St. Louis Public Schools is the general director of this NEA project.

NEW PUBLICATIONS OF POLICIES COMMISSION

The Educational Policies Commission of the National Education Association has recently issued three new publications. The first, "A Program for the Education of Returning Veterans" contains a brief digest of the main points of Public Law 346, popularly known as the G. I. Bill of Rights. It presents a program for state and city school systems and for colleges and universities whereby they may study the responsibilities which this law has placed upon them. The bulletin should also be in the hands of the secondary school principals and the secondary school faculties.

The second bulletin "Let's Look at Education and the People's Peace" outlines the Commission's program for making education contribute to the winning and the keeping of the peace. It takes the form of a series of forty cartoons with a minimum of reading text.

"Education for All American Youth" is probably one of the most important publications that has been issued by the Commission during its nine years of work. The bulk of the volume is devoted to a concrete and fairly detailed description of three sample educational programs,—one for a rural community, one for a city, and one for a state program for the education of youth.

This volume also outlines two directions for the advancement of secondary education in the United States—one through an adequately financed program from local, state and federal sources and the other a federalized youth program operated and financed from Washington.

E. M. CARTER AWARD TO MISS ELTING

Miss Alpha M. Elting

The E. M. Carter Memorial Award was given to Miss Alpha M. Elting at the University of Missouri last summer. Miss Elting is the fourth person to receive this award which carries with it a cash gift of $100. The award was established by the Executive Committee of the Missouri State Teachers Association on October 12, 1940, as a reminder of the contributions to public education made by E. M. Carter during his twenty-five years of service as executive secretary of the Missouri State Teachers Association.

Miss Elting, now employed as teacher of commerce in the Hays high school, Hays, Kansas, was born in western Oklahoma, but moved to Jasper county, Missouri, when five years of age. Her elementary education was received at the Elmira rural school in Jasper county and her secondary school work was done at the Carthage high school. In 1929 she received the B.S. Degree in Education at the University of Missouri. From 1929 to 1933, she taught social studies in the New London high school.

Entering Government Service in 1935 she was employed as a secretary in the Treasury Department at Washington, D. C. This position was resigned in 1943, to return to the University of Missouri to do graduate work in education for the purpose of returning to the teaching field. Miss Elting is a member of Pi Lambda Theta.

Miss Elting believes that the "present chief educational objectives are to develop a true sense of values in the youth of today, and to provide educational opportunities that will prepare them to make a living in today's society."

"BUILDING TOMORROW'S SCHOOLS TODAY"

FOR THE THEME of the Annual Convention our President, Miss Grace Riggs, has chosen the significant words "Building Tomorrow's Schools Today." President Riggs and Secretary Keith have managed even during these difficult days of programming to secure able talent to present the theme of the annual meeting with its many implications in bold relief for convention attenders.

The theme implies direct planning on the part of the teachers and citizens of this state. If education is to lead the way in the emerging era, its leaders must counsel to pool their knowledge and plans.

As industry plans for reconversion, the schools must prepare for their key role in peace. Educators are looking upon a world that has changed rapidly in the last five years. A modified pattern of education is needed for our youth and adults of tomorrow.

The blue print of tomorrow's schools will show changes in curriculum, aids and devices in teaching, textbooks, classroom and building design, preparation and training for the teaching profession, extension of the education program upward and downward, size of administrative units and other details. This, the Eighty-second Convention of your Association, affords you an opportunity to be in on the continuing of this colossal task.

There are some indications that this, our third wartime convention, may be the last before peace again reigns over Europe. Let us make every effort to bring about this condition, give unceasing support toward the Pacific, and at the same time lay the corner stone for Tomorrow's Schools.
